-The New York World says :"The markets for cotton and cotton goods have evidently reached a crisis that must be followed by important results. The stocks of cotton in this country have become so reduced that, with all that may be expected to come to market during the next four months, there will not be enough to keep the spindles of this country going during that time. A number of interesting questions consequently arise: Will cotton goods sufficiently advance to justify spinners in importing cotton from Liverpool? In the competition for cotton, to what prices will it adva: ce? ... In the 'crushing out' process to which the smaler spinners are being subjected, what effect will it have upon public and private credit and the money market? How long can

our gre manufacturers go on piling up goods produ wa a loss?" OMARLESTON. MONDAY MORNING, JUNE 14, 1869.

The letters published in our columns during the last week show in detail the condition and prospects of the crops in every part of the State, and, written as they were cultural condition of their respective neighborhoods, the information which they contain is as valuable as it is interesting. At this time it is, of course, too early to estimate the cotton crop of the State; but the area in cultivation indicates what the result should be with favorable seasons. But the corn and wheat crops are so far advanced that their extent may be readily calculated. We are also able to show the manner in which the freedmen are working, and what is the apparent effect of the use of fertiliz published as a basis, and adding to them agricultural intelligence obtained from other sources, we are able to draw some general conclusions in regard to labor and the crops showing these clearly, we divide the State into four groups of counties. 1. The mountain region, consisting of Oconee, Pickens, Anderson, Greenville and Spartanburg. 2 The upper middle section, consisting of Abbeville, Laurens, Union, York, Chester, Edgefield, Newberry, Fairfield, Lancaster, Kershaw and Chesterfield. 3. The lower middle section, consisting of Marlboro'. Lexington, Richland, Sumter, Darlington, Marion, Barnwell, Orangeburg, Clarendon and Williamsburg. 4. The seacoast region, consisting of Beaufort, Colleton, Charleston, Georgetown and Horry. The agricultural characteristics of the four divisions

The corn has been backward but is coming full work of a gang of twenty. This plan, The State of California, with the view of on rapidly, and an abundant crop will be Much more cotton than usual was plant-

Under favorable circumstances, the yield, notwithstanding the increased quantity originally planted, will fall short of that of last year. Oats are doing finely. More attention is being paid to the cultivation of grasses. Fertilizers were used freely and in greater quantities than ever grain must be bought before the crop of known before. One planter, and not a large one, spent $1500 in fertilizers, and considers himself amply repaid.

The negroes are working well, especially where their employers go into the field with them. Politics receive but little attention. The people generally are out of debt, and the prospects of the whole division are highly encouraging.

Second D.vision. As a rule, less wheat has been sown than last year, Chesterfield being about the only exception. The grain, however, is unusually five, and a full crop will be made, although the area is less. Of corn, much less has been planted than in 1868; in Laurens twice as much cotton as corn was put in. The corn is now healthy. but small and backward. A large yield is expected in Chesterfield; but the probabilities are that the total corn crop of this division will show a falling off as compared with last year. Barley was sowed to some parative failure. Oats, on the other hand, are doing well and will be up to the aver-

Far more cotton than usual has been planted; in Chester one-third more. The plant is backward and the stands are poor. From some parts of the division the reports are favorable; but upon the whole the cotton crop of the division should be rather less than that of last year.

We do not think that there will be any great variation from the crop of 1868. Oats are in good condition.

The area in cotton is larger than usual, except in Orangeburg. The yield to the acre is expected to be as large as usual, which would make the crop exceed that of last year. The cotton worm has been seen in both Orangeburg and Barnwell. With favorable seasons the caterpillar is not expected to be dangerous to the crop. ·Fertilizers, as in the other divisions, which is capable of yielding the most valuable agricultural productions, has since the war, from various causes, been more depressed than any other division of South Carolina. From the facility with which many portions of it could be reached from the sea, it was at an early period of hostilities parily abandoned, and the valuable improvements allowed to go to ruin. From the impoverishment of the owners and the absence of successful crop seasons, the work of restoration has necessarily been slow, and in some cases has not yet been attempted. The leading crops of this section of the State have been for a long period rice and sea island cotton. The growth of rice was nearly destroyed by the war, and only the most certain and best locations have since been placed under cultivation. But with a home demand rather greater than the native product, and with the continuance of fairly remunerative prices, there has been some disposition to increase the cultivation, and the crop of South Carolina, which was about 25,000 tierces in 1867-68, will probably approach 35,000 tierces for 1868-69 ers. Taking, then, the reports already The growth now coming forward would, if favored, show a still further moderate increase, but the long continued drouth has caused the streams to be affected with salts. and on Cooper River and some other points in South Carolina. For the purpose of the damage will be serious, unless relieved by an early fall of rain.

Notwithstanding the experience of two seasons disastrous from the operations of the caterpillar, the planters of the long staple cotton have planted nearly the area of last year. The plant was somewhat put back by the late cold spring, but the weather has since been dry and warm, and the progress of the crop has been favorable No certain indication of the yield can be given until a more advanced period of the season is reached, the plant having to run the chance of worms, storms and other casualties.

A moderate amount of corn was planted in this division, but the cold and unfavorashows the crops in that year to have been | ble spring, with the absence of rain since, have nearly destroyed the crops where they were planted on light soils, and the yield of this grain will be extremely limited. This will render the purchase of a considerable amount of corn necessary as the season advances. Labor on the sea islands is abundant, and is only scarce in the rice districts. The negroes are reported to be working well. There being but little money in the seacoast region, the negroes are generally paid for their labor in land. A cultivate for himself, and works for the sixty hands for two days each, equal to the with different modifications, has been widely adopted this year. The prospects of the division are good, and the planters believe that the dry spring will make the caterpil lar harmless.

Weighing carefully the condition of the crops in the different parts of the State, we arrive, then, at the following conclusions :

1. The wheat and corn crops of the year will be sufficient for home consumption, but as the yield will be unequally divided, some counties having more and some less than they will need, a considerable quantity of 1870 comes in. Not nearly as much as was bought in 1867-68 should, however, be necessary. More oats will, it is believed, be raised than ever before.

2. The cotton crop of the State will more likely fall short of than exceed the crop of 1868-9. The increased area in cotton and the liberal use of fertilizers will be fully neutralized by the cold spring, and by the fact that the freedmen are now more largely than ever planting on their own account. The land so planted is included in the increased area of the year, but the yield per sore will, on account of careless cultivation, be much less than where the land is tilled by negroes directed by white men. For these reasons we set down the crop of South Carolina for 1869-70 at say 175 000 bales.

8. The prospects (of rice are fair, and with good seasons the crop of 1869-70 should reach 35,000 tierges.

4 The freedmen are working at least as well as last year, and in the upper parts of the State are working better. Politics are growing less attractive; and the laborers are gradually settling down to the convic tion that they can make bread and meat more easily by working, than by running to the polls and waiting for acres and mules which will never come, unless as the reward of patient industry.

Our estimates may, of course, be affected by the events of the future, but they rep resent fairly the condition and prospects of thorough cultivation, we may, even in a year which opened disastrously, obtain a far average return for our money and work.
